

Discover MAURITIUS

Mauritius is often described as a little piece of paradise on Earth. As Mark Twain once said, it feels like the island was created first, and then heaven was made to look like it. This beautiful island was formed by underwater volcanic activity, giving it unique landscapes and rich natural beauty. Even though it's the most crowded country in Africa, people in Mauritius live long, healthy lives—on average, up to 73 years, which is impressive for a developing nation. With its amazing wildlife, stunning beaches, and important location, Mauritius truly shows how nature and human progress can come together in a wonderful way.
